Accused Faints In Court

Prosecution Adduces More Evidence At Murder Trial

Crowd Is Fooled By Shifting

Another lengthy session in the hearing of the sensational sing song girl murder case took place in the Mixed Court yesterday afternoon. The prosecution called five more witnesses: Wang Chengfu, the Chinese detective who made the arrest of the accused, Yen Jui-sung, in Hsuchowfu; Li Ah-nyong, a chauffeur of the Yu Lee Garage and two noted sing song girls, Siao Ling Dai Nyoh and Dee Hong Kwei. Hearing will be resumed next Thursday morning at 9 o'clock.

Shortly after noon yesterday crowds began to gather round the Mixed Court. The calendar stated that the trial would take place in No. 4 Court. The passage to the door of this Court was literally jammed to capacity long before 2:30 o'clock, the time set for the hearing. Especially prominent was the presence for a large number of sing song girls, lawyers' aides interpreters and others who went there to take a look at the alleged author of the gripping murder plot.

EYES ON PRISONERS

The second accused, Ng Tsung-fong, arrived first in the custody of a foreign constable. Little or no interest was shown by the crowd. Five minutes later the first accused reached the scene, the crowd surged forward to say "That's him." He appeared to be physically stronger than at the previous session at which he collapsed. His arm was still in a sling, having been injured, it is said, by the Hsuchowfu police.

The crowd immediately moved back to the doorway of No. 4 Court in anticipation of the opening of the room immediately. But announcement was carefully made to the counsel and newspapermen that the hearing would be staged in No. 2 Court.

In spite of the sudden change of plan, the Court gradually filled up as news had filtered through to the spectators. When British Assessor Blackburn and Senior Magistrate Kwan took their seats, the Court room was again packed while an army of spectators wandered round the No. 4 Court in anxious anticipation.

The prisoners were placed in the dock. Yen, the first prisoner, made a supreme effort to brace up and stand erect. This he only succeeded in doing for a few minutes. His head drooped. His eyes fell and he leaned helplessly over the dock.

NINE LAWYERS

Nine lawyers appeared in the case. Dr. J. O. Fischer watched the case on behalf of the local Special Commissioner of Foreign Affairs, Hsu Yuan. Mr. Ponson Chu and Major C. P. Holcomb represented the family of the deceased. Mr. Lawrence K. Kentwell and Dr. H. C. Mei defended the first accused. Mr. Alexander Krisel acted for Chu Tse-chai.

REBELS ATTEMPT ON BAGDAD IS BEING REPULSED

Serious Situation Grows More Encouraging Is Latest Report

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 18.—Alarming reports having reached London via Paris that the situation in Mesopotamia is growing worse and that the rebels are trying to encircle Bagdad, Reuter learns that the position last week was admittedly serious, but that more recent reports indicate a general substantial improvement. Railway communications between Bagdad and Persia, Bagdad and Hilleh, and Baghdad and Mosul have been restored.

London, August 18.—The Times Teheran correspondent telegraphs that the situation in Mesopotamia is not improving and that the line of communication with Persia has been completely interrupted. Bakaba, thirty miles north east of Bagdad, has been looted.

It is reported that Colonel G. E. Leachman, the Assistant Political Officer, at Basra, has been killed at Feluja.

An attempt was made to murder the Political Officer at Erbil, 50 miles southeast of Mosul, which indicates that there has been a recrudescence of trouble in Kurdistan.

Shanghai Lumber Dealers Hit By Slump In Prices

Oregon Pine Drops From Taels 75 To Tales 65 Thousand And Further Declines Are Expected!

A considerable slump in lumber prices that is being announced here today is said to be an outcome of improved exchange conditions and lower freight rates and it is held to be highly probable that the coming weeks will see a further decline of prices.

According to the announcement Oregon pine rates which have been fairly firm at Taels 75 a thousand feet go down today to Taels 65 with reductions down to Taels 60 for large quantities.

The drop from Taels 75 to Taels 60 means a total fall in local values of Oregon pine amounting to about Taels 450,000. This constitutes a heavy loss to all Shanghai dealers because most of the cargo has cost laid down at Shanghai high prices, having been imported or ordered before the recent drop in costs of Oregon pine and freight rates.

STOCKS IN SHANGHAI

Stocks in Shanghai today roughly amount to 30,000,000 feet of which 5,000,000 are held by The China Import and Export Lumber Company, 5,000,000 by the Robert Dollar Company, 5,500,000 by the F. L. Kowkee Lumber Company, and 4,000,000 feet in the Mitsui Bussan Kaisha yards. Among the smaller dealers the Shun Tah Lumber Company has about 3,000,000 feet and sundry Chinese yards about 3,000,000. It is known that roughly 3,000,000 feet are due to arrive here shortly for A. O. Anderson & Company on behalf of a number of small Chinese yards, and about 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 for Jardine's on behalf of small Chinese buyers.

The outlook is that if heavy shipments continue to arrive, causing an overstocked condition of the local market, further drops in costs will take place in order to clear these stocks before the 15th day of the 8th moon, about October 6, which is the big settlement day for Chinese dealers in meeting their obligations at the time of the Autumn festival.

FORESEES BIG LOSS

An authority expressed the belief yesterday that the Oregon pine price may go as low as Tales 45 a thousand in the coming weeks.

TO PAY INDEMNITY

The French and one other allied legations have advised the Chinese government to continue the payment of the unwaived portion of Russia's boxer indemnity to the Russo-Asiatic Bank and the Russian Legation.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs is reported to be displeased with the request.

According to Chinese official reports, 50 Japanese troop trains have passed from Chita to Vladivostok loaded with Japanese forces, Semenoff's men, hides and other merchandises. The Chinese authorities have stopped the trains at the border and disarmed the Russians.

JAPAN ARMS TO HARBIN

Semenoff's men are being broken up. The disarmed stragglers are drifting into Manchuria.

Japanese made arms are being shipped to Harbin. It is feared, however, that the purpose of the Japanese is to rearm the disarmed men of Semenoff.

The report that the Chinese have been driven out of the railway zone is not yet confirmed.

U.S. TO RADIO BERLIN

Berlin, August 18.—It is semi-officially announced that negotiations have taken place at Berlin with regard to the restoration of direct wireless communication with America for private traffic.

Hitherto the American naval station has controlled the entire service but it transferred on August 1 the private traffic to the American Radio corporation.

NO BRITISH CENSOR

Until peace is established the naval station will continue communication without a special agreement. Simultaneously the New York Radio service will erect a big station near New York.

Thus for the first time since 1919 it will be possible to communicate with North and South America, Japan, China, etc., without passing through "London's world censorship."

COMMANDER OF OCCUPATION ARMY REFUSES WITHDRAWAL OF HIS FORCE ON DEMAND

(Reuter's Service)

Berlin, August 17.—Crowds At Kattowitz, in Silesia, demonstrating against the Russo-Polish war, attacked French cavalry, killing a trooper. The French replied with machine-guns and grenades, killing 9 and wounding 26 rioters. The police refused to remain on duty, so the crowd besieged the police stations in order to obtain arms. The French ultimately withdrew from the streets.

Berlin, August 18.—Following the sanguinary encounter between rioters and French troops at Kattowitz, the townsfolk paraded the streets singing "Die Wacht am Rhein" They then sent a deputation to the Inter-Allied Commission at Kattowitz at eleven o'clock at night requesting the disarmament and withdrawal of the occupation troops. The French Colonel emphatically declined, which still further incensed the crowd. At one o'clock in the morning uninterrupted rifle-fire and hand-grenade explosions could be heard. It is reported that a French officer was than addressing the crowd.

The Vossische Zeitung publishes a later report that the French troops had barricaded all the streets of Kattowitz.

MILLIONS LOOTED FROM RUSSIA, WRITER'S STORY

Kolchak's Share Of Loot Has Disappeared, Asserts Former Official

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 18.—A romantic story of how the stock of gold held by Russia when the Tsar was deposed has been dispersed is related by M. Novitsky, the former Assistant Minister of Finance of the All-Russian government, in Messrs. Samuel Montagu's Review of Foreign Exchanges.

He states that the gold reserve at the outbreak of war exceeded £160,000,000, then the greatest accumulation in the world.

In pursuance of measures to export it in order to pay for war supplies and external loan coupons, the first shipment of £8,000,000 was secretly loaded on a British cruiser and a transport at sea at night time 30 miles from Archangel.

GERMANS LAY TRAP

Nevertheless the Germans discovered the step and sowed a mine-field along the route. The ships arrived at Liverpool but they were damaged and the government therefore abandoned this route.

Subsequently £60,000,000 were transferred by rail to Vladivostok.

A part of this was conveyed in Japanese cruisers to Vancouver and the remainder sent to Japan.

About half of the balance was paid to the Germans, who handed over a portion of it to the Allies under the terms of the armistice and it now lies in the Bank of France.

The remaining £68,000,000, which was captured from the Bolsheviks when they were forced to evacuate Kazan in July, 1918, reached Omsk after several adventures last year.

SENT TO HONGKONG

Part was shipped to Hongkong for military supplies and Admiral Kolchak loaded the remaining £44,000,000 into a special train of 40 cars, accompanied by an armored train, when he was compelled to evacuate Omsk. A collision occurred enroute and the train caught fire. Some of the cargo was lost but the rain continued. Its subsequent fate, however, is uncertain in consequence of Admiral Kolchak being killed.

the front line, is developing most successfully, and that the Bolsheviks have been repulsed along the whole Northern front.

Warsaw, August 18.—The Soviet troops are evacuating Brest Litovsk. Polish successes are reported on all fronts except in the South, where the Bolsheviks are advancing in the direction of Lemberg.

TO PROTECT POLES

London, August 18.—At last the silence at Minsk has been broken by an official Bolshevik report of the proceedings there yesterday.

The Conference opened at seven o'clock in the evening with a speech by M. Danishovsky, Chairman of the Russian Delegation, who reviewed the history of Russo-Polish relations and underlined Russia's pacific policy.

He emphasised Russia's respect for the independence of Poland and her right to determine her own form of Government.

M. Danishovsky also said that Russia must demand from Polish landlords such guarantees against renewed attacks as would not be necessary from the workers and peasants of Poland.

The Conference then adjourned until today.

POLES NEW SUCCESSES

London, August 18.—A Polish communique of today's date claims marked new successes. All Bolshevik attacks on Warsaw have been repelled and a new counter-offensive has begun on the line Demblin (Ivangorod)-Kock. The Poles have captured a number of towns. The enemy is retreating in panic from the Vistula in the Otwock sector.

SOVIETS' CLAIMS

London, August 18.—The Bolsheviks claim that the establishment of Soviets is progressing in Eastern Galicia and that the new authorities are "abolishing landlords, manufacturers, bankers and other exploiters of human labor" and all real personal property is being transferred to the State.

Charity League Is Holding Colorful Garden Fete Today

Preparations in connection with the Garden Fete to be given this afternoon at the Park Villa, No. 1, Kiangwan Road, by the members of the Charity League, are well advanced, and the event promises to be a great success.

Numerous bamboo kiosks have been erected on the lawn and will be used as refreshment booths, lottery stands, fish pond, and a number of other attractions calculated to give the guests a most enjoyable afternoon. Two orchestras, one the celebrated Carlton Band, and the Philarmonica Portugueza, a group of talented amateurs, will be on the spot to discourse music all the afternoon and evening. The whole of the grounds and residence which will be open to the public, have been artistically decorated and include thousands of paper lanterns, which in the evening will be lit up, giving the gardens a fairy-land effect.

COMMITTEE IN CHARGE

The organisers of the Fete are the Mothers of the Holy Family Convent, of whom Mere St. Alice is the most promiment figure. The working committee consists of Mrs. H. O. White, president of the League, Mesdames Klinck, Pereira, Mencarini, Norman, Almeida, Vizenzinovitch and Miss Hayes, most of whom will be in charge of stalls, and they will be assisted by about a hundred young ladies, comprising the junior committee of the League. The decorative arrangements are in the hands of Mr. C. C. Ozorio, who has had long experience in the planning of fetes of this kind.

The entertainment was originally intended for the afternoon, from 4 to 8 o'clock, but in order to give the young people ample time in which to disport themselves, it has been prolonged to include dinner and dancing until a late hour.

Among the many attractions, besides afternoon tea, other refreshments and music, are a variety stall, fish pond, and a lottery booth where a $1 ticket will bring anything from one to a hundred dollars worth of useful articles. Donkey rides also figure as one of the pleasures of the afternoon.

The admission is $1 per person and tickets are obtainable at the gate.

HISTORY OF LEAGUE

The Charity League is an organisation started in 1914 by local ladies with a view to helping the Mothers of the Convent in taking care of needy families. It has been doing much good work among the poor ever since its inception, and is at present paying out in rents alone an amount aggregating $100 per month for houses used by such families under its care. The society has a large membership, including a junior committee who meet every Wednesday to do needle work which is distributed at the society's annual Christmas party.

The object of this Fete is to raise funds to complete payment on a piece of land which has been acquired on the North Szechuen Road Extension, opposite the Public School for Boys, where a Home will be erected. When completed this Home will have sufficient accommodations for eight separate families. The building itself, as well as a part of the land value had already been donated to the League, and it remains for the Fete to bring in sufficient funds to complete the amount required for payment on land as well as other fixtures necessary for the home.

Agitators Sent Home By Police Officials In Paris

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, August 17.—Messrs. Adamson and Gosling, representing the British Labor "Council of Action," left for England this evening after one day's sojourn in Paris.

When the delegates were lunching at a cafe on the Boulevards, a Police Commissary intimated to them that if they did not leave this evening, an expulsion order would be issued. The delegates subsequently visited the Ministry of the Interior and the Foreign Office with a view to obtaining permission to prolong their stay, but permission was refused.

TEMPS APPROVES PREMIER

Paris, August 18.—The Temps expresses its full agreement with Mr. Lloyd George's frankness with regard to their threats of the "Council of Action" and declares that there exists an international conspiracy not only against the Treaty of Versailles, but against the British Empire, the directors of which are carefully concealing from the workers their real aim, which is the dissolution of the Empire.

trade has proved rather disastrous since the crisis in trade in Japan and China, and the tightness of money in the past two months has caused heavy losses in native wood transactions among Chinese dealers.

This condition applies not alone to Shanghai, but also along the Yangtsze valley ports. If prices drop to about Taels 45 the losses which have to be faced in Oregon pine divided among the few dealers in China, will run to something in the neighborhood of Taels 1,000,000, which will bring about a wholly serious situation for many of the smaller operators who are, in the majority of cases, under capitalised.

The situation also may mean that foreign commission houses importing for the Chinese dealers, may have to bear a sizable share of the losses, because irresponsible Chinese buyers will not be able to meet their obligations under contracts entered into.

Chapei Firefighters Out With Lanterns

In response to a fire alarm given at 10:46 o'clock last night from the Hongkew bell tower the Hongkew division turned out for what proved to be an insignificant blaze in a house on Kashing Road Extension far out of the Settlement limits. When all danger was found to be past the division returned to its headquarters when after an interval of some twenty minutes the Chapei brigade set out with a fanfare of bells and horns to answer the same alarm. Their course led by the Victoria Nursing Home and it was observed that one of the machines was decorated with lanterns. After a time, probably satisfied that the blaze really had been extinguished, the Chapei firefighters returned as noisily as they had turned out.

A fire in a shop at D274 Shantung Road near Foochow Road at noon yesterday was found to have been caused from the cigarette of a smoker who had fallen asleep and had set fire to his bed. The blaze was extinguished with slight loss.

PRICES IN U. S. BEGIN TO DROP

Letter From Boston Business Man Intimates Era Of Hard Times Near

Conditions in the United States up to July 8 are accurately reflected in the following letter from a prominent Boston business man to a Shanghai friend:

"Things haven't improved much here. Prices are very high and merchandise scarce. Sugar is thirty cents a pound (when you can get it). Coal is fifteen dollars a ton (when you can get it). There was a strike at the mines, considerably curtailing production and now they are unable to get cars to ship the coal. And all food products are high.

SHOES ARE DOWN

"The shoe market has gone to smash, and you can buy shoes at less than they cost the manufacturer to make them. The reason for that is as follows: The public did not buy from the dealers, who were asking anywhere from twelve to twenty dollars a pair. People decided to wear old shoes, if necessary having them re-soled and repaired. The season was very backward and transportation was in chaos, so that the manufacturer could not deliver his shoes to the wholesaler and jobber, and by the time they reached them, there was no demand from the retailer. That resulted in the cancellation of orders and the goods being sent back to the manufacturer. The latter owed the banks considerable money at about 5 or 6 percent, whereas the banks are getting 8 and 9 for all the money they can loan, so they told Mr. Shoe Manufacturer that he must take up his notes. He couldn't pay his notes with shoes so the manufacturers have opened up retail stores all over the country and are selling direct to the consumer. You can imagine how the poor retailer feels. He is between the devil and the deep sea.

CLOTHING ALSO

"The prices of clothing are also beginning to come down for the same reasons. A number of our big mills have closed down and I understand about 50,000 people have been thrown out of work. The indications are that hard times are pretty near at hand and I believe there will be considerable hardship this winter.

"I will cite a little incident that happened to me which will give you a good idea about conditions. I was having some repair work done on my house when things came to a standstill because they could not get any cement. They said they had to quit the job as it was no use trying to go any further, and I thought they were "kidding" me. I started on a hunt for some cement and found that it was $2 a bag and could not be had at that. After a little wire pulling I succeeded in getting the 36 bags necessary and things at my house have started up again this morning. Can you imagine cement being scarce? Carpenters, painters, plumbers, brick-layers, all get at least eight dollars a day for eight hours. Some of them get ten dollars a day. There is scarcely any building going on and it is next to impossible to rent a house or an apartment. Rents have taken a big jump, many of them doubled."

Mr. Chu is thrown into jail in the southern part of this city. In the jail he has composed several poems describing his life in the prison and has published them in some of the local newspapers.

Clarence Corrigam, first assistant engineer in the Keketticut, is at present in the American jail serving a sentence of thirty days, which, with a fine of fifty dollars, was imposed for beating a rickshaw coolie.

Man Hides Money in Coffee Pot, Then Forgets

CLEVELAND, O.—Eugene Para reported to police Monday night that $54 of his savings which he had hidden in 2 coffee pots in his restaurant, had been stolen. Last night he assured the officers that it was all a mistake.

He explained the money was in a small coffee bag inside the pot. Forgetting the money, he said he placed the pot on a steaming radiator.

The coffee boiled over and with it the $54. "I've found the bag and the money behind the radiator," he said.

Murder Case Shifted To New Court; Crowd Fooled

fifth son of Chu Pao-san, the retiring chairman of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce, who is an important witness in the case, Mr. Schual appeared on behalf of Mr. Haskell, who represents the second accused. Mr. Em. Lemiere represented the pawnshops concerned and Mr. R. C. Faithfull prosecuted on behalf of the police.

Before Mr. Faithfull resumed the calling of his witnesses, Dr. Mei asked for the exclusion of witnesses for the prosecution from the Court room. This was granted.

FIRST WITNESS

The first witness was Wang Chen-fu who arrested the first accused up country. He brought him to Shanghai. In the train they did not have much conversation but in the hotel at Hsuchow where he was captured accused took him to his room and showed him a diamond ring. He also said his wife had pawned a pearl necklace for $100. The pawnshop was located on Chungking Road at the back of the race course. A diamond pin and tiara were also pawned by his wife: they have been recovered since. On the return to Shanghai accused was taken to Louza Station.

Witness heard him make a statement in the station which was signed.

The Assessor—What led up to the making of the statement?

Witness—Accused said he was willing to make it and asked for a pen to write it. He admitted the crime and said others were in it. He admitted it at the up country hotel. In consequence of his information, Mr. Quayle and witness arrested the second accused in Chapei, Paoshan Road.

In answer to Dr. Mei, witness said he proceeded up country on police instructions by order of the Mixed Court and from Mr. Quayle. At the yamen in Hsuchowfu he gave his credentials to the authorities. He identified accused who confessed. Accused had been known to witness for several years.

Dr. Mei proceeded to ask whether accused was warned before making any statement that his words would be used against him later on.

Witness—I warned him repeatedly.

Mr. Blackburn—Have you ever heard of such a requirement in Chinese law?

Dr. Mei—It is common law. Every protection should be given the accused.

The Assessor—Whether it is a matter of value or not is for the court to decide.

Witness said accused told him part of the jewelery had been sent to Hongkong. Witness did not carry a revolver, only handcuffs.

Witness added that it was not necessary to warn the accused, because as soon as he saw witness, accused said "I cannot deny any more now the Shanghai detectives are here.

COME TO SHANGHAI

On August 7 at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, witness went to the yamen of the Hsuchow Magistrate and the accused was handed over to him. He brought him to Shanghai and escorted him to the Louza station after his arrival on the morning of the 8th.

At this stage of the hearing, the first accused again fainted and asked for water. The Court not only granted the request but also allowed him to step down from the dock and take a chair. The prisoner lay over the chair in a heap and remained so during the rest of the hearing.

Continuing his reply to Dr. Mei's cross-examination, the Chinese detective said that he went home after handing accused over to the sergeant. On the following morning, he saw accused in jail again.

SAVE LIVING; LEAVE DEAD

Witness denied having asked accused for a statement, saying it was beyond his authority to do so. The statement was taken in the presence of Detective Sergeant Quayle, a Chen and himself. Accused made the statement willingly. No one threatened him.

Dr. Mei—Didn't he tell you that he was advised by Counsel not to say anything until he was brought be fore this Court?

Detective—I didn't hear. He told me that he didn't have a lawyer.

Dr. Mei—Didn't you tell him that if he told you the story, you would help him.

Detective—I have no such power.

Dr. Mei—Didn't you say to him that we will save the living and leave the dead?

Detective—I did.

Dr. Mei—You did. Why?

Detective—I wanted to comfort him.

Witness went on to say that accused was worried about his future. He often asked: "Mr. Wang, will I be sent over to the Chinese authorities?" Witness answered in the negative for fear that he might commit suicide in the cell.

JOYRIDE WITH GIRLS

The prosecution then called Li Ah-nyong, chauffeur of the Yu Li Garage. After identifying the first accused as the man who gave his name as Tsang, the chauffeur stated that on the morning of the 24th of the fourth moon at 2:20 o'clock, accused came to his garage for a joyride together with two women. He drove the car and took the party to the second bridge at Hungjao Road.

There witness was stopped and told to turn his car round and accused went into the field. He remained in the field for about two minutes. After his return, witness was ordered to take the party back to town, returning by way of Soochow Road and stopped at the door of the Oriental Hotel. Witness was told to hoot the horn and a chauffeur, (the chauffeur of the son of Chu Pao-san) came out. The latter hung on to the side of the car and the party proceeded down Fokien Road. In front of the Chiuanli Alleyway, the two girls got off and witness was asked to drive the accused and the chauffeur to Pont St. Catherine. As he had no Chinese license, witness stopped at the Frenchtown end of the bridge. The accused ordered Chu's chauffeur to get his car.

GOT CHU'S CAR

Later, the chauffeur brought car No. 1240, (belonging to Chu Pao-san's son) from the South side of the bridge and the first accused drove it away. The chauffeur, however, was ordered to take witness' car and wait for the accused at the Yu Li Garage.

At about 4 o'clock in the morning, accused returned to the garage and wanted to know how much he owed the concern for the ride. He was told that he had the car for one hour and 20 minutes. He paid $6 for the fare and $1 more for cumshaw. Then prisoner and the Chu family chauffeur walked away.

Cross-examined by Mr. Kentwell, witness said that there was no moonlight on that particular morning. The sky was dark. He was not certain where the accused got off the car in the Hungjao district. Accused was very calm from beginning to end. Witness could not see the girls distinctly from his chauffeur's seat, but he could recognise one of them if he saw her again.

SING SONG GIRL IN BOX

Mr. Faithfull then called the sing song girl, Siao Ling Dai Yu, who testified that accused had sent for her on the 20th of the fourth moon under the false name of Wang. The address was given as 49 Great Eastern Hotel. During the conversation, accused told witness that he wanted to give a feast in her house on the 23rd. Witness told him that she was not certain whether or not the house had already been reserved.

On the 23rd at about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, accused came to her house, witness stated. At that time, she was dressing her hair. He wrote a message to Lien Ying, the deceased sing song girl to attend on him at her house. Witness did not know the deceased. Witness then left her house to do some shopping. When she returned, the accused was still alone in the room. Later, Lien Ying came. He invited both witness and the deceased for a ride. Witness refused and he left with Lien Ying. She never saw Lieh Ying again. On that night, someone in the house of Lien Ying came to witness' house and inquired about the whereabouts of the girl.

MORE SING SONG WITNESS

The rest of the afternoon was devoted to examination of Dee Hong-kwei, another sing song girl who took the ride with the accused on the morning of the 24th of the fourth moon.

Dee Hong-kwei said she knew the first accused by the name of Li. On the 10th of the fourth moon, accused borrowed a diamond ring from her, because he said he wanted to go to the races and wanted to wear it for that day. The ring cost her $1,000; and is over two carats in size, being set in platinum.

Accused never returned the ring as he promised, so witness began to inquire about him. On the 22nd her cook saw accused playing dominoes in a brothal on Hankow Road and witness went to see him. Accused agreed to return the ring but said that it was in her mother's possession.

On the 24th at about 1 a.m., witness accosted accused and again asked for the return of the ring. He said he would have to see Chu Tse-chai, alias Chu Lao-ng, the son of Chu Pao-san. Accused said he could meet Chu at that hour in a foreign brothal, so witness went with him to the Yu Li Garage to hire a car with the intension of going to the foreign brothal.

RIDE TO COUNTRY

The car traveled towards the West through unpopulated district. Witness began to be inquisitive about the location of the foreign brothal and accused admitted that he had to go out to the country to relieve nature before doing any other thing. Accused went to the wheat field in a certain part in the country for a few moments and returned.

The party came back to town, witness said, and met Chu's chauffeur in front of the Oriental Hotel. Accused alone had some conversation with the chauffeur and witness rode back home. The ring was never returned.

Cross-examined by Mr. Kentwell, witness stated that accused left the car for only a few minutes. She could see him move to the field, stoop down and get up again.

Mr. Faithfull asked that the father of the deceased be called to prove that the girl is dead, but the Court read a despatch from the Chinese Criminal Court in Nantao, setting out the facts of the inquest over the body; and adjourned the hearing till next Thursday morning.

The Court plans to be in session all day Thursday in an effort to finish the trial of the case.

SPECTACULAR ENDING

As the Court rose, streams of humanity moved through the alles and entrances of the Court. The majority of the disappointed crowd in front of No. 4 Court remained throughout the session in spite of their failure to secure admission to the day's dramatic scenes.

Hundreds stood in waiting when the prisoners were handcuffed, led to the path under foreign escorts and motored away.

The stream of humanity then dispersed—only to be re-assembled in nearby tea-shops where the tales of the afternoon's scenes were related, depicted and otherwise expounded to the thousands of other interested Chinese who did not have the privilege to witness the actual proceedings.

SEASON IS GOOD AT PEITAIHO

Missionaries Hold Conference At North Beach Resort; Toronto Man Present

(China Press Correspondence)

Peitaiho, Beach, August 16.—The season is at its height here. Almost all the houses are occupied and the hotel at week ends has upwards of a hundred guests. The heat was very severe several days ago but has now broken and people are not so hard put to it to keep cool.

At present there are over fifty houses at East Cliff, which is located about 2½ miles east of Rocky Point where the Railway Station is, and the people of that community are looking forward to forming an association somewhat on the plan that the Rocky Point Association has been using. At this writing a committee is at work drawing up constitution and bylaws.

At Rocky Point there is now in session a summer conference at which about 250 Chinese leaders from various parts of North China, representing many different missions and lines of work, are in attendance.

The well known Biblical scholar Dr. Griffith of Toronto, Canada, and Miss Ruth Paxson who is already well known in China for her forceful addresses, are the principal speakers. Besides addresses the men and women attending the conference have been divided up into groups for the discussion and study of various phases of Christian work.

Mr. Blackstone of Nanking is in charge, as he was last year and before the conference opened, he had had built a large outdoor auditorium with a seating capacity of several hundred, also dormitories and a large dining hall. Tents have been put up on the beach for the convenience of the delegates at bathing time. Their time is well taken up. Besides the discussion groups there are three addresses a day.

The whole program will take ten days to complete. Dr. Thomas speaks not only to the Chinese but also once a day to the foreigners at Rocky Point and another time to those resident at East Cliff. This addition to his regular program is for five days only.

SOLDIERS RETURN

Of the three divisions of troops which Chang Tso-lin brought from Mukden to the scene of fighting several weeks ago, two divisions have returned. The service on the Peking-Mukden Railway is still limited to two through trains a day.

The locals and the other trains are all still discontinued, as the cars are being used to carry troops. At the principal stations along the route the local officials have spent considerable money feeding the troops as they passed through. Sometimes great quantities of food have been prepared only to have the troops failed to arrive or to go through to another station along the line.

For example at Shanhaikwan one day word was received that preparations should be made for several thousand troops. 8,000 small loaves of Chinese bread and a great quantity of bean soup were made ready, but the troops failed to come, so the food had to be disposed of at a considerable loss. Similar experiences took place at other stations.

The local officials were kept on the jump for days and days sending messengers down to the station to find out if any new telegrams had been received regarding troop specials. When the regular service of trains will be resumed, no one along the railroad seems to know, but probably as soon as Chang Tso-lin has no further use for the rolling stock it will be turned over to the use of passengers.

Japanese Writer Tells First Story Of Red Russians

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Osaka, August 20.—Mr. R. Nakahira, the Osaka Asahi's correspondent, has just returned from Russia via Siberia and Mongolia. Mr. Nakahira, who reached Moscow on July 21, 1919 claims to have been the first foreign correspondent to reach Red Russia.

The correspondent throws interesting light on many phases of life in Bolshevik Russia, such as the reign of terror, the popular attitude towards Bolshevism, the supply of foodstuffs and other necessaries, prison life, propaganda organisation, the attitude towards Japan, etc.

Mr. Nakahira was arrested and put in prison several times, and even threatened with military execution, but he was ultimately released.

Mr. Katsuji Fuse, the Osaka Mainichi's correspondent, has also recently returned from Russia. His serial articles, like Mr. Nakahira's, are arousing great interest, Red Russia having hitherto been a closed book to the Japanese.

In Memoriam

(China Press Correspondence)

Kuling, Aug. 17.—At the close of his sermon last Sunday evening in the Kuling Church, the preacher, the Rev. Wallace Wilson of Hankow, made reference to the sad events which had occurred on the Hill during the previous week, in the following words:—

During the past few days this Summer Retreat has again been the scene of tragedy and unexpected sorrow. For the most part the history of Kuling is a happy record of physical benefit and spiritual profit, and for this we have to be thankful. Occasionally, however, in the providence of God we have been called upon to face experiences which because of their terrible nature and their suddenness have not only plunged the whole community into gloom, but have reminded us also that even on Kuling residents are not immune from heartbreaking occurences. It behoves us to remember that even under the pleasant and inspiring conditions of this mountain top visitors are surrounded by unseen and sometimes forgotten forces under which when they are permitted to operate, men may be made to stagger and to marvel. There is little use in attempting to unravel such mysteries. They are inscrutable. They belong to hidden things, which possibly, if it is right and necessary, we may be permitted to understand some day. Meanwhile faith and hope counsel us to say with all reverence, "It is the Lord, let Him do as seemeth Him good." None the less do we today mourn, and rightly mourn, the, altogether unanticapated early removal from the ranks of missionary comrades of two friends who we had hoped would render a long and unbroken spell of useful service in China. They were comparatively young, they were well equipped for missionary duty, they had already acquired a large and varied experience, and they had attested their willingness "to sit where the Chinese exiles sit" and help them home.

Interest of his Master and those for whom his Master has died. Of him, too, it might be said, that "he sat where the morally poor and helpless sit," so that he might guide them to a place of safety and sure supply.

There are none in the ranks of Central China workers whose influence among young men was greater or more salutary than Colson's. His personality was magnetic. His natural diffidence could not, and did not, prevent the attractiveness of his character from exercising a profound influence upon the plastic minds of youth. He was a powerful teacher whose lessons will continue to bear fruit for many a day. No man could say that Colson had no message for him. He was throughout brotherly. Divisional interests and affinities seemed to have been entirely obliterated from his mind. What may be called the fictitious and accidental seemed to have small influence over our friend. The great fact of human need stood out before his vision with ever-brightening clearness. Apart from class or creed, Colson felt, and felt keenly, his own responsibility as a servant of Jesus Christ. I might almost say from my own knowledge of him, that he realised, as I wish we all more perfectly did, that man is the great asset of the universe—not his clothes, material, social, or even religious. It was for sinful men that Christ had died, and being Christ's true soldier, Colson ever and always sought to fight Christ's battles and thus to uplift men.

It was not my privilege to know Miss Kunkle personally but some of her friends are my friends, and from them I have learned that she was a choice spirit—unselfish, heroic, and ceaseless in her endeavor to bring women and girls to the Master she so ardently loved and so enthusiastically served. Last Sunday she worshipped with us in this House of Prayer. Today she is with the King offering we believe a purer and more exalted service in a land where no storm can affright and no avalanche of water can harm. Her translation was swift. Not by some wasting illness not yet on a fiery chariot was she taken, but on the mad rush of a great mountain torrent from which escape was impossible. And thus she went in to see the King in His beauty, and to lay the tribute of an all too brief service at His kingly feet. We cannot help feeling that the tidings of this sad and unlooked for event must have crushed the gentle strings of loving hearts in America and here to whom Miss Kunkle was dear. We can but commend them to God's mercy. May they find in their time of sorrow that perfect calm and rest which the Savior keeps for and gives to those whom he calls upon for His sake to drink from a chalice of loss and pain!

With Mr. Colson I was on terms of intimacy. I knew him as a man of strong, keen intellect, shy of disclosing his gifts to others, but always eager to serve his fellows. He was never known to be unwilling to sacrifice his own good in the

And yet he, with all his gi and graces, has been suddenly taken from us. God knows best. We cannot do other than bow to the Heavenly Wisdom. And yet it is permissable to say that we can ill spare Colson from the lines of Christ's workers in China. Our brother's call to the Better Land was sudden. Ill only for a very brief time, and then translated! We feel almost tempted to exclaim—happy, privileged man! So soon to escape the toil and the tumult of a sin-scarred world, with all its selfishness and greed and oftentimes its base cruelty! At least we may say without fear of challenge that Colson did his part while with us right nobly and well. He shrank from nothing that lay in the line of duty, and we are compelled to believe that the constancy and loyal devotion, which were chief characteristics in him, are qualities which earned for their possessor early recognition from the Master he served, and likewise an early reward.

We pay this tribute of love and admiration this evening to the memory of a good man all too soon taken from us. And may the God of the widow and the fatherless pour the oil of His tender comforts into the hearts of those who this day, in our midst, are deeply mourning because a beloved husband and father has been suddenly removed from the circle of a happy home!

KILBANE'S PLAN TO PASS ON TITLE TO FEATHERWEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP IS NOT BEING TAKEN SERIOUSLY

In Latest "Farewell" Announcement Clevelander Outlines Manner In Which He Would Stage Tournament At Philadelphia To Name Successor

BY CHARLES F. MATHISON

At intervals of six to eight weeks Johnny Kilbane, holder of the American featherweight title, causes announcement to be made that he is about to retire from the ring. Usually this declaration is followed by a match between Kilbane and some more or less able opponent, in which the champion enters the ring at catchweights, while the other chap is restricted to a weight that is sure to weaken him.

Thus in the course of time the Kilbane retirement has lost interest for the public and is classified with sea serpent yarns and other false alarms.

However, in his current "farewell" proclamation the Clevelander injects some extraneous matter that may interest those qualified to succeed this resourceful champion. In his latest effusion the champion announces that as Philadelphia always has been kind to him he is inclined to hand over his crown to some deserving featherweight in a ring in the Quaker City. He says:

"I have reached the stage where I am determined to quit the game. Philadelphia did more to make me than any other city in the world. I have boxed there oftener and been treated best there and this is the city where I want to hand my crown over to my successor.

"I would like to have a tournament arranged there between the eight best legitimate 122 pound boxers in the world, the list to be selected by a committee of sports editors. I will referee every bout and award my championship to the one I think is a winner in the final bout if permission can be secured.

SUGGESTS HASTE

"I would like to have it all completed this summer. I am giving Chancy his chance tonight. I shall give Artie Root an opportunity in July and would like to gratify Pete Herman's desire for a bout. After these I have no further wish to don the gloves."

Could anything be sweeter? The featherweight champion will referee all the elimination bouts and give the title to the winner of a final contest.

He also specifies eight 122 pounders to box for the featherweight title, when the limit of the class all over the world now is 126 pounds.

Kilbane talks like a pugilistic Rip Van Winkle who had been asleep for twenty years. He seems to think the featherweight class is the leading division of pugilism and that all eyes are on him.

Although a boxing champion who retires from the ring has no more control over the title than if he had been knocked out in a championship bout, yet Kilbane is not the first champion to arrogate to himself the right to name his successor.

All preceding champions who thought they had the right to say who should succeed them in the championship failed utterly in their attempts to select their successors, and there is no question that if Kilbane makes the effort he will register a failure.

JEFFRIES FOOZLED

When Jim Jeffries retired from the ring in 1905 he intimated that he would hand the heavyweight crown to a nondescript named Marvin Hart. This announcement caused much merriment, in the midst of which Jeff remarked he was merely joking. That what was everybody thought, and Tommy Burns, who showed superiority over all the other aspirants, was recognized finally as the American champion. With the exception of Hart no one ever referred to him as the champion. In no records of boxing can there be found any recognition of Hart as the champion of the class.

Later on Joe Gans, lightweight champion of the world, caused a laugh by announcing that he had turned the title over to George Memsic, a second rater that Gans could whip twice a day. But Gans did not lose his title till he was knocked out by Battling Nelson, and as for Memsic he gradually faded into the has-been class, where he belonged. He never received the slightest recognition as a title holder.

When Terry McGovern began to get too heavy for the bantam class and set sail for the featherweight title he sought to show his gratitude to his sparring partner, Danny Dougherty, by handing him the bantam championship as a Christmas gift. This amused Harry Forbes, Frankie Neil and other capable bantams, who paid not the slightest attention to Dougherty, who was completely lost in the shuffle and never was even referred to as the champion of the class.

Tommy Ryan when he reached a determination to retire from the ring announced that Hugo Kelly was his successor. But Ketchel, Papke and other rough persons decreed otherwise and Kelly was lost in pugilistic oblivion without ever being referred to as the champion.

MAHER DECLINED

Jim Corbett once offered the championship to Peter Maher, but the champion of Erin knew that gift titles were illegal and he refused to take it unless he won it in the ring.

Thus it can be seen that Kilbane, in the event he tries to name his successor, will place himself in an embarrassing position and his titular heir will be ignored.

If Kilbane ever fulfils his oft repeated promise to get out of the ring and stay out he will have no more to do in the selection of his successor than a wooden Indian in front of a cigar store. As soon as Kilbane steps down and out (and this will not be accepted as a fact until he refuses to match himself with some third rater) the other featherweights in the class will begin a competition for the title. There is hardly a doubt that the International Sporting Club will stage a series of elimination bouts, the two best men to fight in a final for the title.

By this method Kilbane will be saved all the trouble and annoyance of digging up a phenomenon to fill the championship shoes.

Incidentally if Kilbane does not soon retire he may be asked by the International Sporting Club to defend his title in a fifteen round bout to a decision against a worthy opponent selected by the club, and at 126 pounds. If he refuses to do so it is not improbable that a competition will be staged by the club and the winner declared to be the title holder.

Kilbane and several other champions will soon find that the days of indecisive contests with unworthy opponents are past and that they will be compelled to defend their honors against able opponents or else forfeit their championships.

DOUBLE-HEADER TODAY WILL OPEN SERIES SHANGHAI WILL PLAY WITH 15th INFANTRY AND ALBANY TEAMS

Opening Game Will Be Between Regulars And Soldiers While In Second Shanghai Will Cross Bats With Naval Contingent—Visitors Have Fast Work-outs

BY VIOLA VERCLAIRE

The 15th Infantry and the U.S.S. Albany base ball teams were out yesterday for a fast workout on the local diamond, and pronounce themselves fit for the coming battle.

The Tientsin aggregation looks like a very fine bunch of ball players and it is believed that they will give the Shanghai boys a merry time of it during the coming week. The boys, under the leadership of Lieutenant Gibbens, express themselves as being very glad to be in Shanghai again this year. After last year's event this has been looked forward to with great interest.

It is indeed a treat for Shanghai lovers of sports, to be able to witness this series, which will decide the championship of China, and the interest taken is very evident by the number of tickets that have been sold.

STRONG NAVY TEAM

The Albany team has been strengthened by the acquisition of Merrill, Pruitt and Held, and promise to give their opponents a hard battle. The Albany team is a picked team from all of the Navy men in this vicinity, who are ball players, consequently should be a good fast team.

There will be a double header played today, the first game between the 15th Infantry and Shanghai, game called at 2:15 p.m. The second game will be between Shanghai and the U.S.S. Albany.

The probable line-up of the teams will be as follows:

TROEH GATHERS $50,000 WITH GUN THAT COST $19

With A Winchester Nobody Else Can Use He Wins Repeatedly

Frank M. Troch of Vancouver, Washington, one of the team of Americans that won the trap shooting event at the Olympic games at Antwepp reported in detail in yesterday's CHINA PRESS, has won his laurels with a remarkable gun, baffling to all other marksmen, according to the report of a San Francisco paper which is given as follows:

Along about the fag end of a day in late October, 1911, a young man breezed into a hardware emporium in Portland, Ore., and asked the clerk to show him a shotgun that would kill ducks. The young man was shown a dilapidated Winchester, and he purchased it for the munificent sum of $19.

For the past seven years this self-same young man has been making trapshooting history with his miniature "cannon." Trapshooting lore for the last seven years is full of the exploits of Frank M. Troch, for he is the fellow who purchased the second-hand Winchester shotgun. With this gun that no one else in the world can shoot, Troch has won upwards of $50,000 and up to Jan. 1, 1920, Troch has fired 85,000 shots with the gun.

No one else can shoot this gun. It has an eight-pound trigger pull. The average gun has a trigger pull of 3¾ pounds. Shooters who try to use Troch's gun are turned completely around when they shoot at targets.

Troch comes from a family of shooters. He was raised at Watertown, Ia., and about 10 years ago moved to Vancouver, Wash. He is now 31. His father was an excellent field shot and his three brothers are all good trapshooters.

Although learning to shoot as a boy, it wasn't until 1911 that Troch took to trapshooting. After the game season was over he and several others in Vancouver formed a gun club and began shooting. It was just prior to the formation of this club that Troch purchased the Winchester that has made him famous.

Troch didn't shoot at enough targets in 1912 to get into the official averages, but since that time he has shot at 27,800 targets and broke 26,756 of them for a grand average of .9624.

Ping Bodie Tells Of Days When He Was A Real Kidder

BY PROSPER BURANELLI

They say I'm a kidder. I am!—or, rather, I used to be but am not any more."

The righteous accents were those of Ping Bodie, baseball player and humorist. The humorous thing Ping did when I saw him was to set himself up as a batsman of dignity, a center fielder with a serious purpose. Rough house kidding has not the station in baseball it used to have, he opined with the air of a sinner reformed, but admitted that in his unregenerate bush league days he had been a hardened kidder. He unreeled a yarn to enforce the admission.

"When I was out in the tall grass"—he leaned his burly form against the club house wall, and narrated in the husky voice of a rough and ready stalwart—"I played on the Frisco team of the Coast League. Our speciality, next to murdering the pitchers, was riding the colts. A colt named Dugan had galloped into camp. He was a kid left fielder from some two-bit circuit up in Canada, where the snow is. He was a good ballplayer, but he didn't have much confidence. He was always scared that somebody would come along and get his job away from him. Every time a new man reported to the club the kid would get nervous. That's what stood him on his head.

"One day there was a fight in the club house between a three-story tall spit-baller named "Spitty" Schmalz and a mixed ale catcher named Clarence Rafferty. Clarence says to Spitty:

"'Why, you big bum! The only way you could win a ball game would be if they slapped on the kid stuff: Over the fence is out.'

"'Why, you fat beer-face!' replied Spitty, who was educated, 'when a pitcher's got to stand out there and keep looking at a face like yours, he could throw a brick better than a baseball. I can spit on a ball, and I can spit in your eye!'

"Spitty demonstrated. And that's how the fight began.

"The whole team watched the fight, and when it was all over and both of them had got licked, the bat boy went and told the manager. He was a hot tempered little fellow, the manager, and he came rushing into the club house waving his hands.

"'We've got to have harmony on this team,' he hollered. 'We've got to have harmony!'

"The colt left fielder was standing next to me.

"'Who's this guy Harmony?' he asks.

"Why, says I, you poor ignoramus from the Canucks! You don't know who Harmony is? Why Harmony's the greatest ever! He hits a thousand. Fields a thousand. And he never dropped a fly in his life. He catches them in his pocket. And ground balls—why, he just whistles to them and they run up his leg. And he never pulls a bone. He don't know how. Why, kid, Harmony is the greatest outfielder in the world. He makes Ty Cobb look like a has been, never was, can't be, ham-handed busher. If he comes on this team he'll take all our jobs. And if the boss says he comes, he comes.

"'What does he play?' asks the kid, looking worried, 'not left field?'

"He can play any field, says, I. "He could play with cannon balls on a battle field. But his specialty is left field."

"The rest of the bunch butted in on the joke like hard-boiled kidders. They laid it all over the kid, until he went back to the snow bushes. He lost his nerve. All he could think about was Harmony, and he forgot to play ball."

"Pretty hard on the kid," I suggested.

"Those were the hard days," Pink hunched his burly shoulders fatalistically. "Nowadays, though, we've cut the kidding in the big leagues. It used to cause too many fights."

The other players had gathered around. They greeted Ping's solemn conclusion with horse laughs, taunts and towels thrown with professional accuracy. Ping and I escaped the outburst of humor and adjourned outside. Ping was born to the name of Francesco Pizzola, and I wanted to hear something about the "fine Italian hand" in baseball.

"Spaghetti!" he philosophised. "I owe every base hit I make to spaghetti."

I heard a theory of spaghetti as first aid to baseball. The reasoning was clear enough. Bodie's breakfast is a cup of coffee; his lunch a few extra swings at the ball during batting practice. He says that a baseball player works best on an empty stomach. A one meal a day regime is the ideal. But if a hard-working lover of beaf-fast, dinner and supper, and a few extras, is to subsist on one meal a day, that meal must be a meal of magnitude, a meal equal to three meals, a festive meal, a meal of massive bulk, ample nourishment and pleasurable succulence. A spaghetti meal, maintains Ping Bodie. It is the ideal, the paragon, the no plus ultra of meals, especially for a baseball player. A couple of large plates of good spaghetti, with a bottle of red wine to wash it down and a few deep breaths of air between mouthfuls—

"And the next day you feel like knocking the filling out of a hatful of balls," the center fielder apostrophised, swaggering a few steps like a tough guy.

Certainly this theory of spaghetti on the base paths was enough knowledge for one day, but Ping added thereunto his general philosophy of life. Apparently he does not believe in that complicated inside baseball you hear about, for he says it is all very simple. And this is the formula he gave:

"They hire the hitters to hit the pitchers. They hire pitchers to fool the hitters. If the pitchers don't fool the hitters they can the pitchers. If the hitters don't hit the pitchers they can the hitters. And that's all.

"MATTY'S" ILLNESS CAUSES CONCERN ALL OVER WORLD

Famous Pitcher Will Be Aided In Fight Against Plague By Many Prayers

The word which comes from a tuberculosis camp on Saranac Lake, in the Adirondacks, to the effect that Christy Mathewson, one of the most representative figures in American baseball, is fighting for his life against the Great White Plague, will send a wave of horror and astonishment around the world.

Christy Mathewson! "Matty!" "Big Six!" At death-grips with consumption? It is hard indeed to realise. Seemingly in the best of robust health, "Batty," beloved of every baseball-fanatic in America for 20 years, was romping on the Polo Grounds only a few short weeks ago.

48 40 YEARS OLD

On Thursday last Mathewson celebrated his fortieth birthday. He started out with Keystone Academy in 1896 and joined Bucknell College in 1898. He has been playing continuously in the National League since 1901, a record that any player might well be proud of.

In 1899 Christy joined the Taunton club in the New England League, playing under the name of Sullivan. He was with Norfolk in the Virginia League in 1900 and was purchased by the New York Giants in that year from Norfolk. He was returned to Norfolk later in the season and purchased by Cincinnati, who later turned him over to the Giants in a trade for Amos Rusie, one of the best twirlers of all time.

"Big Six" was with New York for fifteen years and was traded back to Cincinnati on July 20, 1916, with McKechnie, Eddie Roush and a cash consideration for Herzog and Killifer, to become manager of the Reds. Christy is now back where he started twenty seasons ago.

It's a long jump back to the season of 1901. It is recalled that the Yankees were just talking of invading New York.

CAPTURED 372 GAMES

According to the official record Mathewson won 372 games and lost 101 during sixteen seasons in the fastest company in the land. He was touched up for 4,296 hits by his opponents, an average of seven bingles to a game, had 772 bases on balls charged against him and was credited with 2,200 strike-outs by the official scorers in the National League during his term of active service in the box.

The Giants won five National League pennants since Mathewson joined them, namely, 1904, 1905, 1911, 1912 and 1913. The Giants won the world's series against the Athletics in 1905 Mathewson won three out of four games taken by the Giants, who landed the series.

For all-round excellence his performance in the series will probably never be equalled, as he shut out the champion Athletics, who were admittedly hard hitters, for twenty-seven innings, with but one base on balls and only one fielding error.

The score of the series of 1905 follows: New York 3, Athletics 0, New York 0, Athletics 3, New York 9, Athletics 0, New York 1, Athletics 0, New York 2, Athletics 0, Matthewson allowed but 14 hits.

Chief Bender won the second game for Connie Mack's champions, while Iron Man Joe McGinnity copped the fourth game for Johnny McGraw's world champions.

SUFFERS INJURY IN 1909

Mathewson suffered a severe injury on the opening day of the 1909 season, when a fellow player threw his bat to one side and accidently struck the pitcher on the chest. This affected his work early in the season.

When America entered the war "Matty" quickly volunteered, although 38 years of age. He was enlisted and sent to France in charge of baseball activities in the A. E. F.

Recently he had been helping McGraw, his old "Boss," train pitchers in the way they should go.

EDUCATORS LEAVE AFTER VISIT HERE

Doctor And Mrs. Wilder Taking Numerous Specimens Back To United States

Doctor and Mrs. Wilder, who have spent six months as visiting professors at Shanghai College, have just left on the Monteagle for their home in Northampton, Massachusetts, where both of them are professors of zoology at Smith College. They have been the guests of Doctor and Mrs. Chen, with whom they had become acquainted while Doctor Chen was pursuing his post-graduate studies in America. Though of different races, the Wilders and the Chens are of kindred spirit, which can be partly explained by their interest in common subjects.

Both Doctor and Mrs. Wilder are authorities on zoology and related subjects. Mrs. Wilder is the author of a widely used Manual on Mammalian Anatomy. Doctor Wilder has to his credit a textbook, published ten years ago by Henry Holt and Co., on the History of the Human Body, which is still a standard work on the results of modern anatomical and embryological research relative to the human structure, and has enjoyed increasing sales even to the present time. The book is written in a semi-popular style, and traces the contribution of the science of anatomy to the doctrine of evolution.

OTHER BOOKS

Doctor Wilder is also the joint author of a textbook on Personal Identification, which gives a full discussion of "Methods for the Identification of Individuals, Living or Dead." The book is regarded as the highest authority by the William J. Burns International Detective Agency, and by other bureaus and agencies for criminal identification. It is indeed a very interesting book and reads like a novel.

While Doctor and Mrs. Wilder were here they have given valuable courses of practical lectures to the students of Shanghai College, and have spent the time in between in making collections of crabs, frogs, salamanders, fishes, etc., having naturally found many species that are not described in any text books published in western countries. They are taking with them barrels full of preserved and pickled specimens.

"I have found no difference in the ability of Chinese students and American students," said Doctor Wilder, as he gave his impressions of his visit to this country during a farewell talk to a few of the teachers and students of Shanghai College. "The brilliant work of Chinese scholars is shown by men who have come to American universities. In Nanking Teachers' College, which I visited, I found Chinese themselves employing modern methods and doing every bit as useful a work as they do in America.

MUST AID OTHERS

"I urge all of you students to go out individually and do your best. In olden times under the emperors of China there was little enough inspiration to patriotism: but now that China has become a republic, you are individually responsible for the welfare of the country, and your heart should be warm and your eye be kindled at the name and at the thought of China. There are many abuses to be righted. Industrial reforms are needed, and the coolie classes must be saved from their ignorance and degradation. Universal education will help the coolie problem. You must not think simply of enriching yourselves but of helping others. I think that Christianity differs from other religions in that it emphasises service for others."

HE ROBBED THE PIGS

Harlem Man Taught Farmer's Family Buttermilk Habit

(New York Times)

A man in Harlem who returned recently from a month's vacation in New England had grown so stout that his friends scarcely recognised him. One of them, meeting him on 125th Street, had to look at him twice before he could be sure of his identity.

"Well," he exclaimed, "where have you been spending your vacation? Wherever you were, I'm sure they didn't make much on you."

"I've had the most delightful vacation," the stout man replied. "Spent it with an old backwoods Maine farmer who raised chickens, corn and a lot of hogs. The day after my arrival I strolled out to the pig pens, and what do you suppose that poor fool of a farmer was doing? He was pouring the finest looking buttermilk into the pig troughs and the pigs were gobbling it up with great grunts of satisfaction.

"I protested, and he said it was sour milk which was only fit for hogs. I stood it as long as I could, and then I asked him if I might have a drink. When he realised I was in earnest he did not know whether to be amused or angry. He repaired grumblingly to the house, returning with a dipper, and much to his disguest I drank two dipperfuls. It was a bit warm, but tasty. He was not long in communicating my weakness to his wife and daughters, and it was plain from their attitude toward me thereafter that I was regarded with something of disfavor and suspicion.

"Moreover, I overhead at times snatches of their conversation when I learned that it had been noised about the village that I consumed a bucketful of buttermilk a day. Neighbors who had never appeared at the house before called ostensibly to see the family, but in reality to see the poor, white trash who drank buttermilk like a pig. I had persuaded the old farmer to keep a can of buttermilk in the ice house for me. Thither I made frequent excursions during the day.

"Late one afternoon I was regaling myself in the ice house with my favorite beverage when who should enter but the old farmer. He was dripping with perspiration, and I could see that his throat was parched and dry. I invited him to sample the cold buttermilk. He shook his head stubbornly. I cajoled and argued, and finally he gave way, and agreed to try it. He drank two dipperfuls. It was not so bad, he decided. He adjured me not to tell his wife and daughters about it. After that he became like myself a buttermilk drinker. For a time he kept his vice to himself, then he confided it to his wife and daughters, and in a short time they too were drinking it. It was not long before the neighbors were all drinking buttermilk.

"From that time on, however, the pigs regarded me as their natural enemy, for they got no more buttermilk. If I ventured near the pens they set up an angry bellowing. Though I dared not mention it to the old farmer, I could see that they were losing weight. On the day of my departure they set up an awful bellowing and shrieking. I thought they were having their noses wired, they made such a fuss and noise. The old farmer explained that they were rejoicing at my departure. They believed they would get their buttermilk back after I had gone.

"Today I received a letter from the farmer, in which he said that the pigs had gone on a hunger strike and, as they refused to eat, he had sold them to the butcher before they fell away too much since the butcher paid him by the pound. He had purchased, he said, a new lot of pigs which had not been raised on buttermilk."

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is particularly a preparation for Infants and Children made agreeable to the taste, acceptable to the stomach and pleasant in its action. It has been in use for over thirty years and has always been one of the most highly esteemed of all cathartic preparations. It has one great advantage over other preparations of its kind in that while it opens the organs readily and completely, it does not have a tendency to produce subsequent constipation so much to be dreaded.

It was only after years of research in the fields of herbs and roots for a combination of purely vegetable matter that would have all the virtues of Castor Oil, without its disagreeable, nauseating properties, especially when used for infants or children, that the formula used in Fletcher's Castoria was found, and which for over 30 years has proven its worth. Try it.

Save the Babies.

Infantry mortality is something frightful. We can hardly realise that of all the children born in civilised countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one quarter die before they reach one year, thirty seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one half before they are fifteen! We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestion, sickness, death. To avoid any possibility of giving your child opiates, or narcotics of any kind, keep Fletcher's Castoria in the house, and Save the Babies.

GINN MODEL LIBRARIES FOR CHINA

TRUE books have been written in all ages by their greatest men; by great leaders, great statesmen, and great thinkers. These are all at your choice; and life is short. Will you jostle with the common crowd, for entree here, and audience there, when all the while this eternal court is open to you, with its society as the world, multitudinous as its days, the chosen and the mighty, of every place and time?—Ruskin.

Shanghai, August 20, 1920.

Dear Sir/Madam:

Living in an age in which knowledge is power and in which the law of the survival of the fittest is making its influence felt in every walk of life, you are bound to be interested in one or more of the unprecedented offers listed below.

By special arrangements made with Messrs. Ginn & Co. of New York City, we are enabled to put into the hands of students of English, and young men or young women of ambition, four sets of collected works of cloth-bound library sizes. These represent the cream of the writings of foremost writers of ancient and modern times, and the selection has been made by prominent scholars who have an intimate insight into the educational needs of the day.

The exceptionally low prices render their purchase possible by the customer of average means so that their distribution is no longer confined to public and school libraries. The provision of a good library where varied tastes may be satisfied goes a long way to discourage young people from the deplorable habit of spending their precious evening hours amidst unhealthy surroundings and in the company of associates of questionable character.

As it will be some time before our next shipment of these libraries arrives from America, we hope that you will take a keen interest in our special offers while the thought is in your mind, and while the oft-repeated truth is reiterated that "life is too short for inferior reading." Your inspection is cordially invited.

Very faithfully yours,
COMMERCIAL PRESS, LTD.
Sales Office,
Foreign Books Department,
C.453 Honan Road,
(Corner of Foochow Road)
SHANGHAI.

NO matter who or what you are, whether a carrier of hods or a supporter of great enterprises, you cannot reach the flush of success, or feel that you are fully rounded out, without the help of good reading.

True, the printed page cannot take the place of experience, but he who knows only what he has seen is woefully ignorant.

It is not how much you read but what you read, that counts.—Nanthaniel C. Fowler, Jr. -:-

WHITE TERROR HAS AWAKENED HUNGARIAN DIET

Official Butchers, Huszar Cries, 'Should Be Treated Like Wild Beasts'

ORGIES OF SLAUGHTER

Such Outrages Must Stop Before Good Will Of Nations Is Secured

The Pester Lloyd of Budapest on June 6 printed this paragraph:

"Painful questions that were whispered in the ears, disquieting rumors that were feverishly circulated, facts with only one meaning—known to all but not mentioned by anybody—have for some time caused a feeling that lay like a heavy mountain on the nation's soul. Today the matter was finally discussed."

DEPUTIES PROTEST

Although the elections to the Hungarian National Assembly were influenced by intimidation and wholesale arrests, by force of arms and assassination, and the Hungarian Parliament is composed of men who had been O. K.'d by Regent Horthy, a number of Deputies protested on June 3 against the established rule of White Terror.

Deputy Drozdy of the Peasants' Party attacked the high-handed and criminal methods of the White Guards and their allies, saying:

"A fortnight ago I went to my estate in the vicinity of Kiskoreroes Pahl, where Zoltan Zakar, a public school teacher who is President of the local branch of the Awakening Hungarians, called my attention to what had happened in the towns of Izsak and Orgovany. He counselled me to bribe the stool pigeon of the local branch of the State Police in order to avoid a fate similar to that of the victims of the Izsak and Orgovany slaughters. It would be a wise policy, Zakar added, to offer money to some of the commissioned officers of the military Hejjas detachment, for it was the custom, and for all owners of estates in the vicinity to give money to the police spy and place substantial sums at the disposal of the officers. Zakar named 10,000 crowns (nominally $2,000) as the price of a safe conduct signed by the Sergeant Major of the Hejjas detachment. In possession of a safe conduct I would have nothing to fear, otherwise I would always be in danger of being put out of the way.

"As I carried not more than 4,000 crowns ($800) with me I paid that sum and was safe for the time being. Now I must return to my estate. If I do not come back to the National Assembly you may find my dead body at Orgovany."

Referring to the above speech of Deputy Drozdy, First Lieut. Iwan Hejjas, commander of the Hejjas detachment and "hero" of the Kecskemet massacres, sent a letter to the news agency Magyar Kurit in which he denied that he was in any way connected with Zakar and accused the National Assembly of having instigated a great many murders in order to discredit the military.

ASSEMBLY IS AROUSED

This insinuation of Hejjas stirred the National Assembly. Party leaders, among them Count Albert Apponyi, Czerti and former Premier Huszar, took up the gauntlet on June 5 in a meeting to which the above quoted extract from the Pester Lloyd refers. As the National Assembly met behind locked doors the only report of the proceedings available is the one published by the Official News Bureau, which certainly suppressed the most compromising statements. Nevertheless the censored report contains valuable information as to conditions in Hungary.

Count Albert Apponyi opened the debate.

"When we were at Neuilly (during the Allied-Hungarian Peace Conference) we placed our hope," he said, "on the English Labor Party, which is in a position to help us in the defense of Hungary's just claims. The murder of Somogyi (editor of the Nepszava) had the effect of a flash of lightning. The murder of Somogyi assassinated the hopes of Hungary. The press all over the world attacked us; we were isolated and could attain nothing. While it is not possible to bring back to life those who have been murdered, we perhaps might be able to awaken sympathy for Hungary. That is more important, as there is a possibility that the Labor Party will be the English party in power in the near future. Our hope that the conditions of the peace treaty will be revised rests upon the British Labor Party. As matters stand, that party cannot be expected to be friendly disposed to our pleading. Let us be honest. Let us admit that atrocities are committed not by civilians marked as army officers, but by army officers.'"

Apponyi enumerated a number of instances and continued:

"Being a member of the Hungarian Independence Party, I have never missed an opportunity to attack the Austrian Army. But now I must say that the spirit of discipline, loyalty and chivalry to strangers, as observed in the former Austro-Hungarian Army, might be reawakened in the Hungarian Army.

CANNOT BE TOLERATED

"It cannot be tolerated that peaceful people, who, after a day of hard work, sit down in front of a cafe for recreation are insulted and attacked. We must suppress such outrages before they realise the fears of those who place their hopes on the good will of foreign nations.

Here Apponyi was interrupted by cries:

"Who are the officers you have in mind?"

Deputy Rubinek shouted: "Osztenburg."

Deputy Mezker—He must be hanged.

Deputy Drozdy—I will volunteer as executioner.

Deputy Cserti of the Peasants' Party—The Osztenburg detachment was sent into my district three months ago and is still there. I do not know why the Government took that step, but I assume that it was done because the people of my district are anti-Hapsburg. An ensign of the Osztenburg Detachment recently ordered me to throw away a rose I wore on my coat lapel. When I protested that I was a member of the National Assembly, the ensign replied: "Well, we have already finished men who were more influential than a member of Parliament." A person near to Osztenburg advised me to leave for Budapest, otherwise I would be killed.

Deputy Huszar, formerly Premier—Two organisations, namely the army and the "Awakening Hungarian," commit acts of violence. The officers commit murders compared with which the atrocities of the Commune and the Spanish Inquisition are insignificant. The officers of the army and the "Awakening Hungarians" ought to be treated like wild beasts of prey and killed.

The speaker described some of the terrible orgies of torture and murder, especially the slaughter of Abony, of which he said:

GIVES DETAILS

"By order of Capt. Mackay, commander of a company of the Hejjas Detachment, eighteen prisoners, among them the Socialists Johann Virag, Arpad Finta, Michael Hir, Ladislaus F. Gede, Johann Palfy, Stephan Mohacs, Ladislaus Pinter, Johann Kis, Ludwig Timer and Johann Hoksari, were murdered on April 28.

"Eighty Socialists were arrested on May 29 by order of Capt. Baron Pronay. The prisoners were beaten in the town hall until they were covered with blood. Karl Sebestyen and two workingmen, Stephan Buzalko and Stephan Mikolay, were killed with the butts of rifles.

"On June 1 a detachment of Pronay's company kidnapped twenty-one persons from Czegled and slaughtered them near Kacskemet. Among the victims were Franz Schlosser, a former police captain; Karl Mikloszy, a college professor; Geza Revesz, a merchant; Franz Gottlieb, a wholesale tobacco dealer; Paul Czalisnyoe, a carpenter; Franz Ecseri, an official of the States Railways; Paul Varoczi, a compositor, and Mrs. Johanna Imre, the wife of a foreman.

"I know that by exposing the White Terror I am inviting an attempt against my life. But things have come to such a pass that it is the duty of every citizen to insist upon remedial action, irrespective of the consequences."

In conclusion, Tuszar asked what steps the Government intends to take to restore law and order.

It has been proved time and again that the Horthy Government not only connives at but established the White Terror and ordered the assassinating of Jews and followers of all political parties except arch reactionary Christian Socialist Party. But in the face of universal and impassionate indignation Minister of National Defense Soos did not dare to defend the activities of the roaming gangs of White Guards (Hungarian Army) and the "Awakening Hungarians." The limit to which he dares go in defense of the Government proteges and tools was to hint that criminal civilians disguised as soldiers were responsible for some of the outrages placed at the door of the army. He promised that criminal proceedings would be started against First Lieut. Hejjas for his political activities and affiliation with the "Awakening Hungarians."

UNSCRUPULOUS PROPAGANDA

"It is to be wished," Soos continued, "that the 'Awakening Hungarians' should understand that their actions are bound to bring about Hungary's ruin. The 'Awake Awakening Hungarians' carry on an unscrupulous propaganda in the country districts. Irresponsible elements, the majority wearing the uniform of soldiers or officers, are destroying law, order and property. Detachments of the army have been ordered to arrest any civilian who wears the army uniform."

Not much may be expected from Regent Horthy and Minister of National Defence Soos. They are hardly willing to prosecute their associates in a campaign of wholesale murder and robbery beside which Mannheim's infamous rule of terror in Finland sinks into insignificance. But the discussion in the National Assembly is likely to arouse the Hungarian people. No bloody tyrant was ever able to maintain himself against the united opposition of his subjects. The debates of June 3 and 5 perhaps mark the beginning of the end of Hungary's greatest shame.

His musical efforts were followed by his being "paddled" by the initiation team. He was then stripped to the waist and painted with tar.

SWISS RAILROADS SEEK LOAN IN U.S.

Government-Owned Carriers Face A Debt Of 500,000,000 Francs

ALL HARD HIT BY WAR

Cost Of Fuel Avanced Nearly 800 Percent, While Tourist Traffic Ceased To Exist

Geneva, July 1.—Perhaps in no country in the world which has not been involved in the war are railways in such a serious financial state as in Switzerland. The Federal Railways alone have now a floating debt amounting to about 200,000,000 francs—$40,000,000—and the Federal Railway Department has just announced that between now and the end of 1920 it will need 150,000,000 francs. The head of the financial department estimates that in 1920 there will be a further deficit for the Federal Railways amounting to about an aditional 150,000,000 francs.

With a floating debt and financial requirements amounting altogether to 500,000,000 francs, the Swiss Government sees no course open to it but to apply for help to the United States.

The indebtedness of the Federal Railways is largely due to the increase in the cost of fuel and in the rates of wages, and not to decreased receipts from passenger and freight traffic. Thus in 1913 Switzerland spent 18,890,000 francs on coal; that is, 38 centimes, or less than half a franc, per locomotive kilometer. In 1919, however, she spent 68,148,000 francs on coal, or nearly 3 francs per locomotive kilometer, about eight times as much.

PLAN IMPROVED SERVICE

The railway authorities have decided to introduce improved train services on the Government lines between July 8 and Sept. 19 despite the continued shortage of coal, the supply of which, however, is improving. The Federal Railway coal reserves, indeed, have sometimes only been sufficient for two months, whereas before the war they would normally have sufficed for eight to nine months.

Despite the eight hours working day, the number of railway servants and employes of all categories was in 1919 only 39,500, as compared with 38,400 in 1914.

A great drain upon the Federal Railway budget this past year was the cost of electrification, which was decided upon before the war, at a time when the estimated cost was about one-quarter of what it now proves to be.

Although there has been a fair increase in the takings of the Federal Railways during the first five months of 1920, it is insignificant as compared with the losses resulting from their six lean years and the enormous and unavoidable increases of expenditure. Switzerland is the railway junction of Europe, and during the war not only was international traffic reduced, but tourist traffic, which used to swell nearly all Swiss railway budgets ceased to exist. On an average, during the last few years before the war, about 1,000,000 tourists visited the country during the year.

As for the smaller lines, some of them built for local convenience, but most of them for tourists, such as mountain cog-wheel and cable railways, many are bankrupt, and none are prospering. One at least has been broken up and the material sold as old iron. The Furka Railway, from Brigue to Disentis, a line which cost 38,000,000 francs to build, and was to have been opened in 1914, was abandoned by the French company which built it with French capital and at present it can only run from Brigue to the Rhone Glacier station. The tunnel under the Furka Pass, not having been completed has been left to go to ruin, and so has the whole line between the Fukra and Disentis.

LIGHT RAILWAYS HARD HIT

As to the light railways with which Switzerland bristles—railways mostly built for tourists' convenience—out of thirty only six paid any interest in 1919, never more than 5 percent. These six are not tourist lines proper. Of the thirty, twelve had credit balances, mostly small, whereas seven of the debit balances ran into millions of francs.

The one salvation for these railways is the regular resumption of tourist traffic, and at present there is no sign that many tourists mean to visit Switzerland this Summer. For one reason most of Switzerland's neighbors who used to visit her tourist resorts so much, cannot afford to do so now, if only because of the exchange. The Germans, who formed the bulk of her visitors before the war, could not now travel about the country for less than 200 marks a day, whereas in 1913 they could have managed on 8 to 10 marks. The Austrians are in a much worse case still, and the French franc is still not worth half a Swiss franc. The Italians, of whom a fair number also used to visit Switzerland, cannot afford to lose about 70 percent on the Swiss exchange, and as for wealthy Russians who once frequented certain parts of Switzerland in such numbers, they are now either reduced to beggary or have lost their lives. Similarly with regard to Turkey, Hungary, Rumania, Greece, Bulgaria and Poland. Even English people hesitate to come now, especially as railway fares have been doubled or very much raised and the English pound is still more than three francs below par.

A good many persons have also been prevented from coming to Switzerland by the passport regulations.

LONDON LOSES ITS KIWI

Only Apteryx In England Is No More—Wingless Bird Nearly Extinct

The total extinction in England of the kiwi (or apteryx) has become a reality. The London Daily Mail announces the death of the Regent's Park Zoo only specimen. The specie is nearly extinct in New Zealand now, but the British Zoological Society has written to the New Zealand Government asking if just one more kiwi can be spared from the island sanctuary.

Zoologists will mourn the loss of the dwarf wingless ostrich more than the Zoo visitors, for not one in ten thousand ever saw it while it lived there more than nine years. The keeper would turn out this queerest of birds every now and then, but the long-billed bundle of apathy and sleepiness scrambled back into its box as soon as released.

A curious point about the kiwi is the fact that its nostrils are at the tip of its long worn-hunting beak, and in the ardour of the chase it emits an unpleasant snuffling noise. Its mating call is a pig-like squeal.

England is responsible for the virtual extinction of this rare bird. British ships brought rats to New Zealand, so weasels were sent to exterminate the rats. When they had nearly wiped out the kiwi, the New Zealand Government found a ratless island and consecrated it to the poor bird. But the problem of saving an idiot bird that puts all its eggs into one shell, so to speak, was a difficult one. The kiwi laid one egg a season, nearly as big as itself. Exceptional mothers would lay two eggs and then find it almost impossible to hatch both, as the ends would project out beyond their feathers as they sat on them.

Cotton Market

Messrs. J. Spunt and Co. write as follows in their report dated August 21:

China Cotton.—Our market during the past week has not shown any improvement in spot buying. The Mills are keeping aloof for the present in the expectation of further declines in the rates while the little business that has evolved for deliveries has been done at about 5 mace lower than the level ruling as last reported. The heavy drop of 4.80 points in the price of spot Mid-American as between 39 cts., last reported and 34.20 cts., as per telegram of the 19th instant is no doubt having a certain influence on prices of the local staple which combined with the universal favorable weather for the Cotton plant at this time encourages an ever bearish outlook. However there still remains some scope for reactionary conditions and points out to the advisability as a safeguarding policy to replenish depleted stocks at every favorable break in rates. Tone of the market, Easy.

Love, And The Censorship

THE following letter which we have received from a young Chinese girl who is studying in one of the foreign schools for girls discloses a lamentable state of affairs and we would just like to know what the people who conduct these schools are going to do about it!

This young lady, as she plainly says, is willing that her letters should be submitted to the school censor in time of national war stress, but now that the Great War is over why should her love letters be censored? Why not let the battle of Love be begun? We suppose that there is more or less censorship of letters in school for girls all over the world. But how about the boys? Why aren't their letters censored, also? Why should any love letters be censored?

How about the emancipation of womanhood? After all the beautiful things poets have said about it, "Is love a crime?" as this earnest young lady asks? How is a young lady to know which young man she ought to marry, if she is prevented from receiving letters from several, or even a dozen of them? The school people have told her that being in love would interfere with her studies. Note the brilliant manner in which she disposes of this objection. But here is the letter:

Dear Sir: The liberty of correspondence is a legal privilege of a citizen, protected by law except in time of war. Now it is very strange that girls in school cannot mail letters until they have been strictly examined by the superintendent or the school head! Such cases may be seen in the old style Chinese school, but, to my great dissatisfaction, many of the mission girls' schools, even in Shanghai, also do the same thing.

I have tried to find out the reason why they follow such policy. One friend tells me it is because some of the mission schools are in charge of old maids. They have devoted their lives to the Holy welfare and remain single. So they wish to educate every girl to be a ditto of themselves. Such a reason is too ridiculous to be taken seriously but I protest that the censorship of letters in a girls' school is established to prevent the exchange of love letters.

Do they think that love is a crime or a sin, or something impure or shameful as the conservative class of Chinese think? Are American girls in school in America so treated or were they themselves when in college? Is it possible that an American girl is educated to be ignorant of love or to free her heart from love and is it possible that any of the female sex, Chinese not excluded, can be kept ignorant of love? They have free thoughts, they are citizens of the Republic, so we are, and they—we feel very grateful on this point, with enthusiasm, transport freedom and liberty to refresh our thirsty minds and break down all our old fallacy of thraldom and inequality. They wish China to follow the steps of America and do everything in the American style, but why do they only on this question of love keep us away from the American fashion as far as possible?

Some educators say that a girl in school will divert her brain and thought from her study if she has something of love in her heart. But I do not believe so. A girl will have much more spirit if she has love in her heart, just as a boy feels fresh and inspired as he keeps company with his sweetheart, and I strongly believe that love makes one an optimist, increases his or her personal efficiency, gives him or her pleasure and sweetness, and may change a dull boy into a wise, or a silly girl into a smart, and that in every respect, love destroys crime in society. Dr. Sylvanus Stall, author of the Purity and Truth Series, said "Association with women is never anything but inspiring and elevating."

I do not write an essay on love, as a psychologist or a philosopher does, but I strongly believe, also I wish to tell you, that love is natural and can not be banished from a girl's heart, and any love letter is also natural, and should not be examined. Every love letter is welcome to a girl, but as she sees that her letters are all examined and not a word of sweetness permitted, how disappointed she is! So she begins to worry, to be discouraged, and how may her class work be expected to be good?

Another reason I hear from a superintendent is that the censorship of letters is only following the Chinese custom and to keep faith girl's parents, who, they think, are all of the conservative class and hold the doctrine that boys and girls should not be friends. This point I wish to explain also.

The family of a girl student in a mission school is more or less Europeanised or Americanised and many of them are Christians. They do not wish their girls to be unsocial with boys. Moreover, since the student movement of last year, all the people have better understanding of the sexual relation, and the cry for the emancipation of women is echoed and re-echoed everywhere in the country. They are foreigners, but they should know the present situation and never get behind the times. They are advised to have a bolder, freer outlook, to value co education and co-operation of the sexes. The barriers between the sexes, like high mountains and vast waters before, which have now been overcome by steamers and airplanes are gradually being eliminated.

Still, some protest that love letters will lead to some martrimonal complications, for some Chinese girls are early betrothed by their parents, and if they are not carefully guarded from the love of other young man, their families will suffer much. But do they think that a marriage without love, as dictated by the parents, is a happy marriage and will last long? Surely not. Then why should a girl sacrifice herself and her life to be the bride and the wife of one whom she does not know? Marriage for love is thousand times better than that of no love, or, in other words where there is no love there is no marriage; and the early engagement should be broken by either party if one feels dissatisfied. This is a lecture the teacher should give to every girl. And if they examine the letters of a love nature, how may a marriage of love be brought about?

I do not say that every mission school for girls has the same rule one or two I believe are fairly free of this curse. But last autumn a girl in a school on North Szechuen Road was dismissed because of the discovery of a love letter! Think of that! I will ask once more, "Is love a crime or a sin?" Yours sincerely,

"A GIRL."

Energy—A Strange Wizard

Garrett P. Serviss Replies To Man Who Presents Old Problem

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS
(Eminent Astronomer and Writer on Subjects of Scientific Interest)

"One of my friends has proposed a problem which we find ourselves unable to solve. Two watch springs are taken, made of the same material and in all respects similar. When wound up both have potential energy. If one is allowed to unwind it loses its potential energy. The other is put into a clay cast in order to keep it wound up. Then both are put into equal amounts of acid. Is the same amount of energy required to dissolve both springs? So far we have always got the same result—that equal amounts of energy were given off. Since energy cannot be destroyed, where has the potential energy of the wound spring gone? It is of a quantity hardly to be overlooked in the experiment.—D. P."

This is an old poser. As far as I know no experiment such as you describe has ever resulted in a successful tracing of the potential energy of the dissolved spring. If some experimenter having the ability of, say, Robert Andrews Millikan, of the University of Chicago, who measured the amount of electricity represented by a single electron, should think such an undertaking worth its cost, he might be able to show clearly just what becomes of the energy in question.

But the lack of such demonstration, in this case, does not at all shake the belief of the physicist in the validity of the scientific doctrine of the indestructibility of energy. If you should see a stream of water suddenly disappear your confidence that there must be some hole, or holes, into which it dropped, or was drawn, would not be weakened by the fact of your failure to find, or to locate, the holes. The character of water would be too well established in your mind of that.

TOO WELL KNOWN

Just so the protean character of energy is too firmly established in the mind of the scientist, by the results of numberless experiences and tests, to permit him to believe that in a particular case energy can absolutely disappear instead of changing into another form or forms.

Suppose we get at the gist of the problem from another side. Imagine a ball suspended in the air. It possesses potential energy by virtue of its elevated position above the ground, and if released that energy would be transformed into kinetic energy as the ball fell. Now dissolve the suspended ball in a basin of acid. If no substance escapes in a gaseous state, the weight of the ball will be added to that of the basin, and the latter will possess all the potential energy that belonged to the suspended ball. In this case we see clearly that potential energy cannot be destroyed by simply altering the state or form of the matter to which it appertains.

The ball, as a ball, no longer exists, but its essential substance, or total mass, continues to exist combined with the acid. Gravitation acts upon it as before, and if the basin is now allowed to fall, its original potential energy, together with the additional potential energy derived from the dissolved ball, will be transformed into an amount of kinetic energy proportional to the total weight and the velocity.

When the basin strikes the ground and its contents are scattered what becomes of the energy? Apparently it disappears, and it would baffle the experimental skill of a Faraday to make evident to the senses the various directions, and disguises, that it has taken. He would have to trace every spatter of liquid, every quiver of a shaken molecule, every infinitesimal accession of heat to the colliding particles, every incalculably minute loss due to friction, etc. But he would know, and nobody of competent knowledge would dispute, that the entire sum of energy that existed in the ball and basin at the beginning of the experiment existed still somewhere among the objects affected by the fall.

SAME IN PRINCIPLE

The case of the wound up spring is not different in principle. The acid in which its substance is dissolved, does not, like the basin of acid in which the suspended ball was dissolved, possess, by virtue of its position, the same kind of potential energy as that of the destroyed ball, but we cannot doubt that in some form, which might in some way be rendered evident, the energy still exists, though dissipated beyond the present reach of our senses or our tests.

Mr. Risteen has tentatively suggested that "the two sides of the coiled spring, being in different states of strain, act like plates of different metals when immersed in the acid, and give rise to electric currents through the liquid, whose combined chemical and thermal effects correspond precisely to the potential energy that was stored in the spring by winding."

This is sufficient to indicate the wide field of escape opened to the apparently lost energy. But it is no more destroyed than the substance of a shell would be destroyed if it were blown into particles so fine and endowed with velocity so great that all became instantly invisible.

REPUBLICANS FAVOR COX

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Dear Sir: Were I to be at home during the coming election for President I would vote for James M. Cox, although a loyal Republican and agreeing with the party's platform.

Unfortunately the party made one mistake and that was the nominating of Warren G. Harding—a weak, wishy-washy type of politician, who has never done anything that stamps him as a strong, big man. Besides, he is controlled by those who are obstructing the signing of the peace treaty. From recent reports received from home, a great many Republicans are dissatisfied with Harding's nomination and will consequently vote for Cox although their sympathies are with the Republican party.

On the other hand, after having been acquainted with James M. Cox for some time, I know that he is progressive, clean and fair and has also been quite successful in business. He has the initiative and courage of a strong man which may be shown by the following incident during the winter of 1918. At that time, as every one is aware, coal was extremely scarce and it so happened that the government had routed a train load so that it would pass through Ohio, which state was practically without coal and could not seem to secure any. Governor Cox hearing that the train was in the yards awaiting orders to proceed, commanded that it be diverted for the use of the state. The answer came back, "Impossible, the federal government has allocated it to another state." This did not deter Cox, who immediately sent men to seize and unload the coal, which was done in a very short time.

The Republican party however is very strong, but there will not be a walk-over in the coming election as originally predicted. By exercising extreme care and watching its step the Democratic party may be able to put Cox into the President's chair. Very truly yours,

G. WARREN HEATH.

A NEW HOME SOCIETY

Dear Sir: Another indication of the far-reaching effect of the recent discussion on the subject of "Foreign Influence in Chinese Homes" is seen in the letter of your Wuchang correspondent. Hitherto our efforts have been directed towards the formation of a society whose activities, as "Another Young Husband" rightly points out, cannot, at least for the present, but be limited to Shanghai alone. He has hit upon a very useful suggestion which, if properly acted upon, will not fail to help accomplish our purpose. But I still believe that the formation of a society is necessary. Many of our young wives are bookloversbut there are as many of them who do not care to read. For these and the illiterate, books alone will not do. We must show them something real, something that they can see for themselves and copy. Here the usefulness of the society we are proposing comes in.

I would therefore suggest that "Another Young Husband" start a movement for the formation of similar society in Wuchang. I believe there will be no lack of enthusiastic and well-educated Chinese wives in that town to support him.

Regarding his suggestion that "Experienced" husbands should write books for our young wives, I should think that these books should be written by experienced wives and not husbands, inasmuch as words of men about women's affairs will only rouse indignation and carry no weight. I have talked over our present problem with girls and women and have found that at least one of them feels extremely indignant at the suggestion that men should be expected to teach their wives.

She considers that men and women are equals as regards intelligence and that women ought to be independent enough to teach themselves in things which directly concern them.

In order to make our efforts constructive, I will volunteer my own services for translation or other work in connection with the compilation of such books as suggested above if any of our educated and patriotic sisters will have enough nerve to come forward and shoulder the task.

Before closing my letter I wish to congratulate you, Mr. Editor, on the success of the present discussion which has been conducted under your auspices, for already a large notice has been put up in front of the Chinese Y.M.C.A. announcing a lecture on "Chinese Women and Domestics" to be given at 8 p.m. Sunday. I hope our young wives, not necessarily Maggies, will attend this lecture in which we shall expect some sound advice from the lecturer who is, as announced, a woman. Thanking you for space, I am, Yours sincerely,

A YOUNG HUSBAND.

A CHANGE OF IDEAL INVOLVES A CHANGE OF TYPE

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Dear Sir.—The points raised by Miss Kwei in your valuable paper and which have elicited so widespread an expression of opinion, are, I believe, inevitable occurrences in a society which, increasing in knowledge, slowly forsakes its old ideals and adopts new ones. A change of ideal necessarily involves a change of type. Hitherto, it seems to me, discussions have been more about the characteristics of the changing type, leaving unsaid what should be the desirable elements of the changing ideal.

If ability to speak good English is part of an ideal eligibility to honor, respect and emoluments, people will apply themselves to it, at home and abroad, regardless of the expense and physical impediments. If "sparrow playing" (especially in brothels) and the partaking of "flowery feasts" are ideal avocations for "swells," no doubt they will indulge in such pastimes.

The average American father, it is stated in a recent periodical, is under the necessity, in planning a home, of foregoing the bath-room in favor of a drawing-room (in addition to a parlor) in the main dwelling house, due to lack of accommodation and seclusion necessary for the love-making of his marriageable daughter. Here we anticipate a changed type of homes owing to changing conditions. I am not advocating, be it understood, the adoption of foreign modes of love-making, but if we want our daughters to "play the cook stove as well as the piano," is it not necessary that the construction of our dwelling houses be so modified as to make the kitchen easily accessible and other reforms made and innovations introduced so as to render service therein pleasant?

This last question opens up a vista of thoughts on the necessary reforms and innovations, some of which I shall indicate by the mere mention of their names:—cleanliness, sanitation, slave girls, nurses, maidservants, manservants, cooks, shopping, food raising and control, market going, cook books, cooking, cooking utensils, home planning and residential architecture. Much can be said also about the introduction of innocent games and pastimes for the young and old of a family, the ideal correlation and fulfilment of the several duties of its members and the adoption of approved means of social intercourse between members of different families which all form such a prominent feature of home life.

This letter is written to express an individual opinion as desired by some of your correspondents. The questions involved are, in fact, so ramified and their bearing on our present and future societies so important, that, even without invitation, I feel impelled to venture the opinion that their discussion should not be left to students, young bachelors and young husbands alone. What, for instance, is our ideal of a soldier, a trader, a banker, a workman, a professional, an industrialist, a captain of industry, an official, a public servant, a patriot, a teacher, a husband, a father, a wife, a mother, a student, a diplomat, a diplomat's wife? As our moral and utilitarian conception of the ideal, I submit, so will be the ultimate realisation of our types. I leave to others older and wiser than myself to enquire further into all these questions and to consider how best may undesirable types be eliminated, but to my mind a robbing soldier and a striking student are both freaks of sociological evolution, while dancing, in addition to the ability of speaking fluent English may be reckoned among the desirable accomplishment of an ideal diplomat's wife.

It is time for elderly fathers to have an innings. I doubt not but that many of them have sage suggestions to make which may prove fruitful of salutary reforms. The consulting boards of our girl-schools may do well to come forward with suggestions regarding the extension or inclusion of domestic science taught or to be taught in them. We must take the initiative ourselves and should not bring foreign "bachelor-ladies" to book for failing to supply an unknown demand. They are the products of another civilisation and the types of another ideal. They ordinarily take no Chinese food and cook no Chinese dishes and to expect them to teach Chinese girls to cook in a Chinese way or to cause them to be so taught without the expressed or implied desire of their charges or of the latters' parents or guardians, is as unreasonable as to expect your correspondent to revert to bachelor ways at the mated age of

"One leads where many follow."

Hall's Distemper has led the way to a new era in house decoration—the era of brighter, cleaner and healthier homes.

It is the most durable of all decorations, lasting for years with freshness unimpaired, whereas wall-papers deteriorate from the first day by fading and accumulating dust and dirt.

Hall's Distemper is a thorough disinfectant, and is applied directly upon the wall, forming a hard surface, from which dust and dirt may be "spring-cleaned" by lightly sponging with warm water.

Hall's Distemper (Registered Trade Mark)

is a unique preparation and has the recommendation of leading sanitary authorities, architects, and decorators everywhere.

YOU CANNOT UNDERSTAND

The "Valet" Auto Strop Safety Razor by looking at it in a shop window or show case. Then it looks like any ordinary Safety Razor, with its leather case, silver plating, its dozen blades. Only when you get it in your hands, when you see the strop put through the Razor, when you realise that the blade is stropped automatically in 10 seconds—then, and then only, will you realise the value of the only safety razor that "Strops itself."

United States Marine Corps School Provides International Correspondence Schools Courses To Marine

Young men may enlist in the Marine Corps especially for the purpose of learning trade, securing an education, or of studying Commercial Spanish or French and preparing themselves for positions in the export trade at the U. S. Marine School at Quantico, Va., according to the provisions of an order now in force in the Marine Recruiting Service. Men enlisted under this order must have the highest qualifications as to character and physique. They will enlist under a special agreement that they will be sent to the Schools at Quantico at once in the case of men who have served before in the Army, Navy or Marine Corps, or at the end of their recruit training, not to exceed three months, in the case of men who have never worn a uniform.

A feature of the agreement is that a parent or guardian desiring to keep in touch with a son or ward's progress in school may arrange to have monthly reports of his school standing sent home by the faculty of the Quantico Schools.

At Quantico they will be attached to the body of picked men which makes up the nucleus of the 5th Regiment, one of the crack Marine Regiments. Each man attached to the 5th Regiment will wear the fourragere, the much prized French decoration won by the 5th Regiment in the great war. In this regiment they will drill and perform military work in the morning, while every afternoon they will attend school classes from one o'clock until four-thirty, except Saturday and Sunday afternoons, which are holidays. Men attached to the 5th Regiment will remain at Quantico until they complete a course, unless there is another war or great national emergency, in which case they will go to the war as one of the crack Regiments of the Corps.

Courses in highly paid trades and professions are in operation as follows: Automobile Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Building Foremen, Contracting Foremen, Carpentry, Brick, Stone and Concrete Masonry, Forestry, Horses and Livestock. In each of these courses the afternoon period of instruction is divided between theoretical instruction at the black-board in classrooms and practical work. The instructors are Marine Officers and enlisted men who have special educational qualifications in the subjects taught. Among the instructors are graduates of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Stevens Institute, the U. S. Naval Academy, and men have been superintendents and foremen in such industrial corporations as the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the Westinghouse Electric Company, and many others.

The textbooks used are supplied by the International Correspondence Schools, and the I. C. C. method of frequent written tests and examinations is used. After long study it was found that the I. C. S. was best adapted to the work of the Quantico Schools, and through the fullest co-operation it has been found possible to install in addition to the teaching and individual instruction of the officers and men in charge of classes, the full I. C. S. system, tested as it is by thirty years of success. Co-operation with the I. C. S. has extended so far that upon completion of a course at Quantico, a student may if he desires secure an I. C. S. diploma recognised by civilian and industrial employers in addition to the diploma given him by the Marine Corps.

The course in Automobile Engineering consists of one hour classwork on the theory and types of automobiles, motors, and machinery and two hours practical work in the shops, a total of fifteen hours work a week, which the student may supplement if he so desires by additional work at night, all classrooms being kept open with an instructor on duty to help ambitious students until 10 p.m. The practical work of the Automobile Course is done in the Post Garage, a large and splendidly equipped plant, capable of doing any type of repair, or if necesary of building complete new cars. The course of instruction familiarises him with every type of motor vehicle from motorcycle to caterpillar tank and with every operation of construction and repair and assures him upon graduation of a much better knowledge of the automobile and its maintenance than is possessed by the average automobile shop foreman.

The course in Electrical Engineering also consists of one hour theory and two hours practical work every afternoon, which may be supplemented by night work if desired. The shop work is done in the Post Electrical Plant which contains three generators of several thousand kilowats energy. House-wiring, dynamo operation and repair, telephone and telegraph and wireless engineering are branches taught.

Other trade and professional courses follow the same general lines as to division of time, and have been pronounced of highest quality by educational authorities.

In the Academic Branches, Common School, High School and Business College courses are taught. Most of these courses are so arranged that a student has three hours classwork every afternoon, with night classes for the specially ambitious. Penmanship, Grammar, Spelling, English Composition, Mathematics, Commerical Letter writing, Stenography and Typewriting, Bookkeeping and Accounting are taught. It is the aim of the schools to provide courses so arranged that a man can come to Quantico and take up subject after subject until he has secured a grammar school and high school education recognised by educational authorities as providing the credits needed for entrance into college, after which he can either learn a highly paid mechanical trade or profession, or can take a business course finishing off with a course in a foreign language and foreign business methods fitting him for a position in the export trade, the whole acquired while student at the Quantico Schools.

The courses in Commercial Spanish and Commercial French are new courses including instruction in the business procedure of Latin America and the Spanish and French speaking nations, designed to fit men for positions in the export trade. In addition to the Spanish and French courses offered, the Marine Corps is in a position to offer successful graduates of the courses named, duty in the cities of Spanish and French America, where the customs can be studied at first-hand, and arrangements be made for a position before the end of the student's enlistment.

The Marine Post at Quantico including the School, is commanded by Major-General John A. Lejeune, the celebrated commander of the Second Division overseas, which division included the 4th Marine Brigade which made history in the Chateau-Thierry Sector and of which the 5th Regiment was a part. It is General Lejeune's constant endeavor to run the Post as much as possible on the basis of a military school rather than a post of the old type. Everything possible is done to encourage school spirit and school success. Baseball, football, and track teams from the Quantico School compete on even terms with the teams of other institutions, and on the Potomac, on whose banks Quantico is situated, swimming and canoeing flourish and aquatic contests are held weekly during the summer.

Today -:- By Arthur Brisbane

Mr. Harding, told about his nomination, has made his speech. He wants everybody to be happy and sees clearly that nothing could be more simple. Just elect the Republican ticket from top to bottom. He does not quite like the League of Nations, but could invent an association of nations that would be sufficiently like a league to pacify all. As much like a league, let us hope, as Hallowe'en pumpkin with a candle inside is like the real devil.

Mr. Harding thinks the Mexican situation as simple as treating universal happiness, and it is. A friendly, neighborly talk, he thinks, will fix Mexico. It may if it is the kind of talk that Harding probably used to have with his father in the woodshed. Socialism is paralysis and menaces the farm, says Mr. Harding, and the glory of America is American womanhood. If that does not suit you, write your own speech.

A little more concrete, more interesting to many, is the official announcement that manufacturers, some of them, are cutting down production, to keep up high prices. Why waste money, on wages and production, if you can discipline labor by lying it off and make as much or more by profiteering in the name of scarcity. There is something in that, a good many millions in it, as the people know to their cost. Those high prices, due to scarcity, will be here after the coming election. The public might like to hear from Mr. Harding on that.

"The happiest day of my life," said the venerable Lipton, when he won a second race, and needed but one more to get the cup. Ninety percent at least, hoped that he will have one happier day, and take the cup with him. A yacht race, about as important as a game of hop scotch, means nothing. And when an old gentleman has been playing hop scotch hard for many years you would like to see him win a game.

Ring Lardner described the race fully for Americans when he wrote that to him it had meant a pleasant four hour nap.

Paul Sleide stole, and they sent him to prison for five years. Ordinarily you would have heard no more of Paul Sleide, but in prison he developed sleeping sickness and immediately became interesting. At Rockefeller's Institute they show you the sleeping sickness germ under the microscope swimming around in a drop of human blood. They tested Sleide's blood, in prison, and found germs to match the Rockefeller swimmers. They pulled all Paul Sleide's teeth, believing the sickness was fed by trouble at the roots, still he slept on. Then the surgeons "tapped his spinal column," so the latest news report says. Until the sleeping sickness or Paul Sleide is destroyed, the scientist will fight those germs. Moral, if you hate to be ignored, and cannot achieve success in the usual channels, develop a strange disease. Mr. Sleide will get something out of sleeping sickness. He and his disease are advertised, if he dies, he will be better off. If he and surgeons conquer the germs, he will doubtless be pardoned as a reward for his contribution to science, and as compensation for a missing set of teeth.

Have you read recent diaries by ladies that killed or tried to kill unsatisfactory gentlemen and then killed themselves? Ruth Randall wrote one—her friend died when her bullet struck him. Pauline Meglgew wrote another, now running in serial form. When she woke up in the other world she did not find her—don't laugh—"soul mate" beside her. But if she looks down on this world, she can see him blinded for life. These diaries have a lesson for young men and women that would like to write for a living or for glory. They are worth one hundred lessons in composition. Every one of those diaries is interesting and shows power, despite lack of education, because the writer was in earnest, felt strongly, and believed what she said. "To convince others, be yourself convinced," said Isocrates, greatest teacher of oratory in ancient Greece. Those diary writing ladies felt and believed therefore what they wrote they made their readers feel. Don't write unless you have something to say, and do not try to express feeling until you possses it. It can't be done.

Miss Meglge tells "Dear Diary" that "there is no word in the language as hard to write as finish, but it must be done." You could judge almost any life by its attitude toward the end. Where the life is satisfactory, the finish is welcome. Remember the epitaph that Stevenson wrote for himself with its "gladly I lived and gladly die, and I lay me down with will."

Victor Hugo said, "the death of the just is like the end of a beautiful day." The wise man meeting the Sybil would ask one question: "How, in what spirit shall I write Miss Meglge's word finish?"
